Allan Relecom

Chief of Clinic, University Hospitals of Geneva (HUG), Switzerland

Biography

Dr Allan Relecom is a medical oncologist working in the oncology department at Geneva University Hospitals. He completed a postgraduate training in internal medicine and medical oncology in Geneva and obtained his post-graduate title in medical oncology from the Swiss Medical Association (FMH) in 2020. He also worked as a research fellow in the Translational Cancer Research Facility of the National Center for Cancer Care and Research in Qatar in 2019, before returning to Geneva University Hospitals where his clinical duties now include the supervision of oncology consults in palliative care and geriatric units. He has authored scientific articles in the fields of cancer screening and tumor immunology. Dr Relecom has a specific interest in public health and has been engaged in the promotion of equity in access to cancer care throughout his career development, notably through his active collaboration with a number of international organisations based in Geneva, including the UICC.

He is a member of the European Society of Medical Oncology (ESMO).
